Authentic style

Vertically sliding sash windows typify a wonderful period in British architecture and window design. Introduced by the Victorians these distinctive windows are as popular now as ever but unlike the original timber construction the modern PVCu equivalent is low maintenance, energy efficient, double glazed and draft free.

The key features that characterise the original timber window have been retained and you can even copy the original design and configuration. Re-create a truly crafted look with a traditionally jointed deep bottom rail and choose from two options of 'horn' to match the original character.

If you've a real eye for detail you may want to upgrade from smooth PVCu to a white woodgrain textured foil. Whilst this mimics a traditionally painted finish, rest assured it will never require a coat of paint.

Re-create the Georgian look

Traditional Georgian bar glazing arrangements can be authentically replicated two different ways.

For a really authentic look, replica Georgian bars are fixed to the surface of the glass (inside and out) and a special spacer bar gives the appearance of separate pieces of glass yet you retain all the advantages of a double glazed window.

Alternatively, Georgian bars can be placed inside the glass unit which makes cleaning windows a simple and quick affair.

Hardware to suit any taste

Whether you want traditional or something with a simpler more contemporary look the Ascent-VS will have something for any taste.

Locking cam catches, tilt latches, pole eyes, hook lifts and restrictors are available finished in white, chrome or gold and are available in either a traditional old style or a smooth, rounded contemporary form.

Contemporary furniture

Energy-efficient glazing

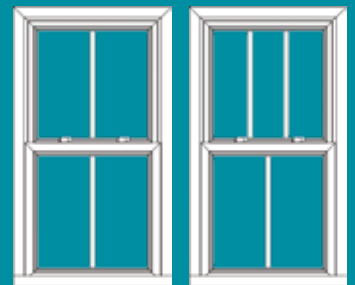

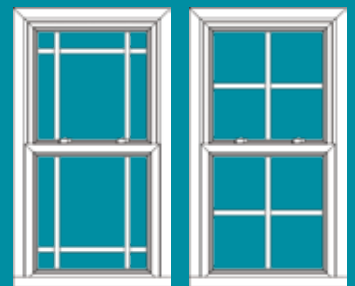

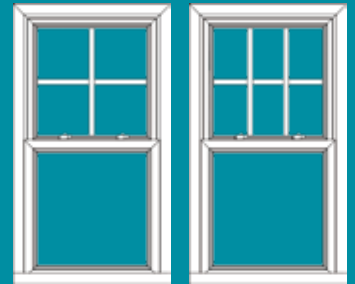

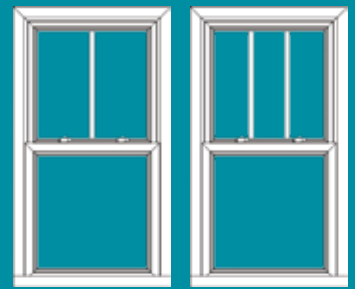

Compared to older, timber sliding sash frames, modern PVCu equivalents offer outstanding energy efficiency, weather proofing, draft proofing and noise reduction to help reduce your heating bills and carbon footprint.

The Ascent-VS range has a C window energy rating (WER) as standard, however WERs of B and A are also available for those wanting to harness the power of direct sunlight to help heat inside the home.

Lasting reliability

Instead of the weights, pulleys and a cord used in traditional timber sliding sash windows to hold the sashes in position, Ascent-VS features a pair of sophisticated spring balances that are uniquely set to match the weight of each individual window. This will ensure a reliable and smooth glide operation for the life of the window when opening and closing the sash and no on-going maintenance.
